

No work. No weeds.

No digging. No kidding.

Gardeners who smell early spring in the air, did this get your attention? Then you definitely need to join us at the San Antonio Herb Society's general meeting on March 20th to meet Tom Harris. If this sounds like your kind of gardening, join Master Gardener, Master Pruner, and gardening columnist, Dr. Tom Harris as he shares tips on this very simple yet revolutionary system perfect for beginning and expert gardeners alike. He will discuss location, construction, soil, planting, vertical gardening, and out-of-season growing—all on a smaller plot that will save 80 percent of space, water and work. This easy, efficient way to garden is making a comeback because it makes so much sense. The program covers everything from construction of the bed to harvesting.

In his foreword to Tom's book, titled 52 Weeks of Gardening, Dr. Jerry Parsons says that this book is the best he's ever seen for this part of Texas— both for new gardeners and experienced gardeners. An interesting, comprehensive, easy-to-read guide to gardening all year long. In general, it applies to gardening everywhere, but specifically it applies to the Texas Hill Country and south Texas. Tells what, how, when, where, and why to do all kinds of stuff in the garden, in the greenhouse, and on the patio with containerized gardening...start to finish—planting to harvest—fruits and veggies to flowers. Check it out at Tom's website, be there or be square (square foot gardening, that is):
